THE PLACE

The Mergui Archipelago

The Mergui Archipelago lies off the far south coast of Myanmar. It's comprised of hundreds of islands that have coral reefs and beaches. The Mergui is home to the seafaring indigenous Moken people. It's a haven for birds, notably the plain-pouched hornbill, as well as marine life like dugongs and turtles.

UNESCO World Heritage Site designation

"While the biodiversity is largely unknown, the intact vegetation on such an array of islands, with associated marine habitats and spectacular geomorphology, is likely to be of high global biodiversity significance. The biodiversity values of this set of forested continental islands, and the limited protection afforded such coastal islands elsewhere in the region, indicates that they are likely to be of global priority and form a potentially important trans-boundary World Heritage inscription."

PILA ISLAND

The Nomadic Moken Seafarers

The Austronesian people of the Mergui Archipelago, live a semi-nomadic hunter-gatherer lifestyle heavily based on the sea. Their knowledge of the sea enables them to live off its fauna and flora by using simple tools such as nets and spears to forage for food.

What is not consumed is dried on top of their boats, then used to barter for other necessities at local markets. During the monsoon season, they relocate to dry-land into temporary huts and use this time to build additional boats.

Normally they live in small hand-crafted wooden boats which serve not just as transportation, but also as the kitchen, bedroom, and living area.

The Legend of Pila Island

A great mythological flood broke the islands into 800 mostly uninhabited, limestone and granite islands. Pila Island is one of the islands created from this legend. Pila is southwest of Great Swinton Islands and Pulo Pankyup and west of Rocky Islet. Pila Island has an elevation of 29 meters. Destinations nearby to Pila Island include Rocky Islet and Pulo Set.

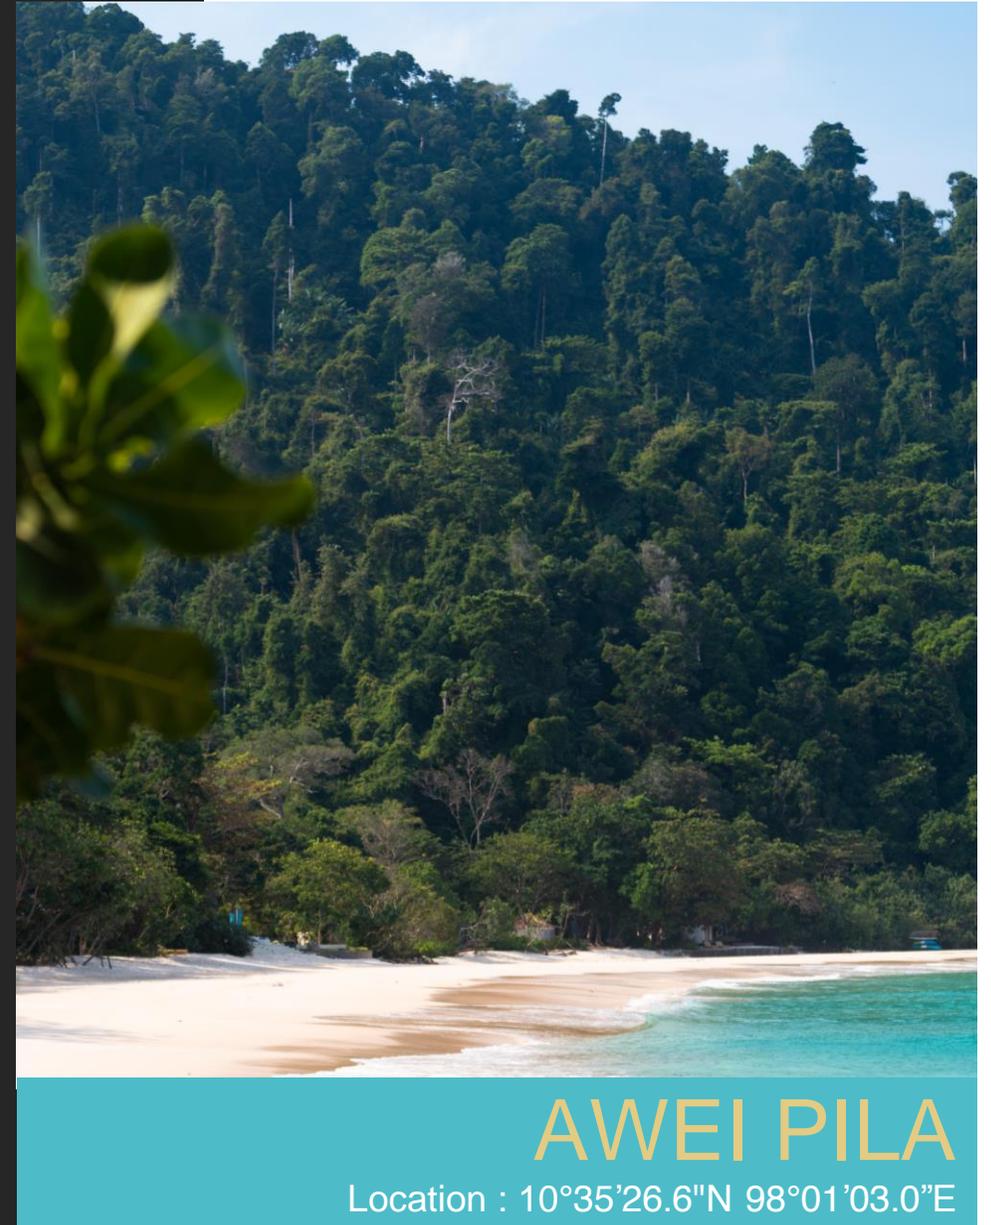

THE PLACE

A 24-key Private Island Resort

Located 80 km from the shoreline of Kawthaung, on the northernmost beach of Pila Island, this secluded beach is surrounded by virgin forest with views out to the open Andaman Sea. The natural bay boasts a 600-metre long beachfront, which is divided into two zones by a large rock formation, granting a select number of units further privacy.

Beyond the beach lies a forested area, offering guests shade beneath a canopy of exotic trees. The adjacent hillside is accessible by trail, opening up opportunities for further exploration of the island's unique flora and fauna.

Guests can also visit the nearby Fisherman's bay to sample a taste of the local seafaring culture as well as a unique water sports experience.

THE PRODUCT

THE DESIGN

The guest areas are centred on the reception, restaurant, and swimming-pool, with rooms extending along the beach front.

Two types of guest rooms are provided to give guests a choice of experience of either the Andaman sea or adjacent virgin forest.

THE PRODUCT

THE TENTED VILLA

The tented villas are designed around a light weight insulated timber and fabric structure. The prefabricated fabric structures allow for low environmental impact, with minimal foundations maintaining the existing vegetation. The architecture reinforces the feeling of a base camp for exploration and adventure, mixed with local touches of Myanmar traditional construction techniques.

Rooms: Ensuite bedroom and terrace: 59m²

The interiors are light and fresh, using white washed timber lattice and duck cotton fabric walls providing a soft and pleasant internal environment in the raw natural environment around.

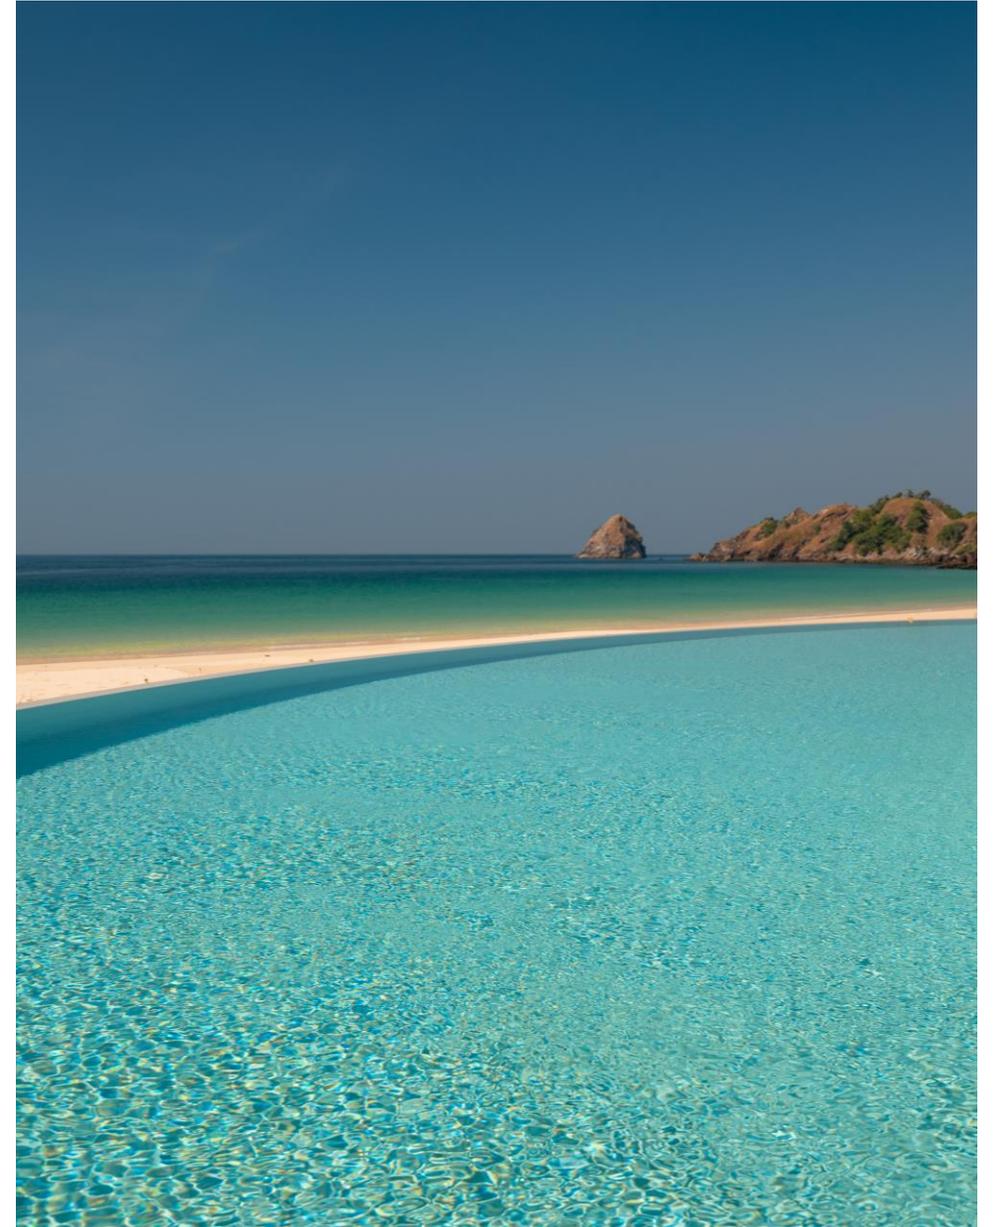

Natural light is allowed in through two large floor to ceiling openings, also giving way to sea views for the beach front suites. Locally produced furniture and decorative items provide further character to the room.

THE PRODUCT

RECEPTION,
RESTAURANT,
BAR &
SWIMMING POOL

This open air heavy timber structure provides shelter to the social hub of the resort. The bar sits in the center with the other two functions flanking either side, all with open view onto the sea and overlooking the swimming pool.
